

Wednesday, September 26, 2018

914 Gladfelter Hall (The Weigley Room)

2:00pm-3:30pm

"Striking to Survive": A conversation with Chinese labor activists and authors Fan Shigang and Li Wen

What is the meaning of the thousands of strikes in China? Do these strikes add up to a "labor movement"? How can solidarity between Chinese and American workers be built?

Striking to Survive includes a uniquely fine-grained account of the strike organized by "Delegate Wu" - a worker activist who served more than a year in prison after the strike ended. The New York Times produced a video about Delegate Wu, which gives a sense of his work.

Join us for a conversation with Chinese labor activists and authors Fan Shigang and Li Wen.

Striking to Survive

Workers' Resistance to Factory Relocations in China
Chinese Worker-Activist Speaking Tour

This event is presented by Department of Sociology and Global Studies Program at Temple University and Haymarket Books